WRIT 541/541G-01 WRITING FOR PUBLICATION AND PROFIT WITH SUSAN PERRY

1. Society for Technical Communication – I have a membership to STC, and I'm part of the leadership team for TC3, the student division. There are many great articles and training items on this site.
2. Dictionary.com – I subscribe annually to this service, mainly because it lets me hear the pronunciation of words. This is great for historical names and places.
3. Questia.com – I also subscribe to this annually. It provides thousands of online books, journals, newspapers, etc.
4. Internet Resources for Writers – There are tons of tips and tricks and guides on this site. Many of the tips will trigger other ideas for articles.
5. Web Resources for Communication Skills – This site offers many examples and guides.
6. Holly Black – has a nice Q&A site listing resolutions to writing challenges.
7. The Dartmouth Writing Program – This site gives tips for writing for specific genres.
8. Writer's Digest – of course.
9. Freelance Writing Organization – Lots of useful material of interest to magazine and book writers.
10. The American Society for Journalists – A wealth of helpful articles and free resources.
11. Poe War – Categorized articles about writing.
12. Writing.com – Community-based writing help.
13. The Internet Writing Journal – A collection of helpful articles aimed at freelance writers.
14. LSC University Writing Resources – Alphabetical listing of helpful sites.
15. Writer's Block – Discussion forum areas for writers.
16. The Business of Writing – Contracts and business related items for writers.
17. Lit.Org – Community for writers.
